

HOW MANY BOTTLES HERE? BOY SCOUTS COLLECTING THEM TO BUY WAR AMBULANCE

Medicine bottles are scarce in England and therefore valuable. The English Boy Scouts are now busy collecting them in an effort to raise a fund to buy a war ambulance.

CAR MEN CLAIM COMPANY DID NOT LIVE UP TO AGREEMENT

Because the men of the street car unions say the companies have not lived up to their agreements made through the board of arbitration last July, the city faces another car strike.

When time came to make the increases set by the board of arbitration, the car companies left out about 200 switchmen, grademen and watchmen in figuring the increases. The union men claim this is a breach of their agreement.

Getting no satisfaction from Pres. Busby, union officials conferred with H. A. Blair, head of the operating board. He offered an increase, but not what the unions claimed due to their men.

State's Att'y Hoyne, arbiter for the men in the board last July, has been appealed to by the unions to call the board together again. The car companies may block this by refusing to let their men appear. They may not want to arbitrate this last difficulty.

If they don't, the union men say there will be more trouble.

Women who canvassed yesterday for funds for relief of Jewish war sufferers got $32,000 in cash and $60,000 in pledges.
